

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

What would happen to your assets if you died today?

There's no better time than tax season to get the rest of life's details in order

Ottawa, Ontario, Canada March 04, 2014 – Canadian Legal Wills (www.legalwills.ca), Canada's top provider of online wills, power of attorney and living wills, and MyLifeLocker (www.mylifelocker.com), the ultimate organizational system for all of life's little details, have joined forces to provide Canadians with security and peace of mind when it matters most.

As of the end of 2013, the Bank of Canada held $532 million worth of unclaimed balances, turned over by banks and trust companies because the owners of these accounts could not be reached.

These lost dollars belong to someone, somewhere, but the trail has gone cold, most likely because of the chaos, confusion and stress that follow the death of a family member.

Less than half of adult Canadians have a signed will. Even fewer have collected all their critical information in one single location – everything from banking, mortgage and property information, to insurance policies and online accounts that can carry balances, such as PayPal. And what about all those social media accounts, left to linger on after their owner is deceased?

Over the past 14 years, Canadian Legal Wills has helped 100,000 Canadians to easily and affordably create binding legal documents through a secure online portal. MyLifeLocker is a unique, personal organization system that allows anyone to collect, organize and manage all the endless details of everyday life.

Following its success in hard copy, MyLifeLocker has gone digital. It is now available through legalwills.ca as a customizable app which users can tailor to their individual circumstances, print in PDF form, and update as needed through a secure login.

Taken together, Canadian Legal Wills and MyLifeLocker is a comprehensive and powerful platform for putting your life, and your estate, in order.

“Tax season, when you are already reviewing financial matters, is a great time to ensure all of your affairs are in order,” said Tim Hewson, CEO of Canadian Legal Wills. “It isn't enough to have a will and to name an executor. To ensure nothing slips through the cracks, your executor must have all the important information about your life at their fingertips – MyLifeLocker is the ideal way to ensure nothing is ever lost.”

“Imagine having every single piece of information you might ever need easily accessible and secure, in one orderly place,” said Sandra Tisiot, founder of MyLifeLocker. “When someone dies, their family needs a complete picture of where everything is so they don't have to go searching while trying to grieve. I created MyLifeLocker because I couldn't find anything on the market that could provide a complete solution.”

About Canadian Legal Wills

Canadian Legal Wills (www.legalwills.ca) is an organization independent of any law firm that works with lawyers in Canada to provide legal document creation services to the public. Its mandate is to allow people to create common legal documents in an easy, convenient, private, secure and cost-effective manner, without paying high legal fees. Members' legal documents can be stored and maintained online. All data resides in Canada and is not subject to the U.S. Patriot Act. LegalWills.ca uses a unique Member-Keyholder relationship, which ensures that the information created by members is completely secure, yet available to their designated personal Keyholders at the appropriate time.

About MyLifeLocker
